Other notable provisions:

National Network for Manufacturing Innovation

The National Institute for Science and Technology is authorized to use unobligated balances for the Network for Manufacturing Innovation (NMI) to coordinate interagency activities in support of the institutes. [Funding can also come from the Energy and Water Appropriations bill, under the Department of Energy's Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy account, to establish institutes]

Advanced Manufacturing and the Revitalize American Manufacturing and Innovation Act (RAMI)

Language recommends $176.6 million for the Advanced Manufacturing initiative. Language encourages the implementation of RAMI and to examine the possibility of establishing regional collaborative networks with advanced manufacturing communities that make full use of the Manufacturing Extension Partnership program centers, ensuring participation of small- and medium-sized manufacturers and utilization of the national laboratories in technology transfer.

Assistance to coal mining communities

Language recommends at least $15 million to assist coal mining communities through the POWER+ Plan or other Economic Development Administration (EDA) initiatives. Funds are targeted at communities that have yet to develop an economic development strategy, in addition to assisting communities with implementation of established economic development strategies.
